Ryan O'Shaughnessy stepped into the executive director role at Trail Mix one month before the pandemic changed the world as we know it. "It's been quite a year" he shared. His proudest accomplishment was the development of the COVID-19 Conservation Corps in partnership with the city last summer. "We basically programmed an extra field season in under two weeks" Ryan said. The conservation corps provided jobs to 30 people who were unemployed or underemployed due to COVID. The project was an outcome of planning by the Juneau Economic Stabilization Task Force.

Trail Mix is a nonprofit started in 1993 to support a "safe and enjoyable Juneau Trail system by bringing people and resources together."

Ryan will share highlights from this year and plans for the upcoming season, including partnership with similar programs across Alaska around a statewide conservation corps program.
